Residents invited to provide input on future of City facilities

Waukesha – The public is invited to provide input on a proposed multipurpose municipal building. The City of Waukesha has been working with a consultant team to complete a Financial and Development Analysis for a new proposed multipurpose municipal building. This new building would seek to combine several city functions currently housed in separate buildings.

The City is considering the consolidation of the buildings as the current buildings have reached the end of their useful life and continued use of the buildings will result in significant maintenance costs. In addition, the buildings are difficult to access, do not allow for effectively providing services to residents, and are not fully functional for city staff purposes. The goal is to create one center that brings together many municipal services and creates ease of access and use for the residents. The consultant team completed a review of three potential sites, including renovations to the existing City Hall, building on the top of the existing transit center and a site on the Fox River in downtown Waukesha.

Residents are encouraged to attend public information meetings at the dates and times below. All meetings will begin with the same presentation and then allow for a time of questions. City officials and representatives from the consultant team studying the project will be on hand for the conversation.
